

NEGROES SOUNDLY WHIPPED

Two negro boys, who had only recently been released from jail, were again before Judge Chenault Saturday charged with stealing a grip at the depot. County Attorney E. W. Senff suggested to the court that sending them back to jail would entail further cost to the taxpayers and would apparently do them no good and asked that they be given a good sound whipping, to which plan their mothers readily agreed. A strong riding whip was promptly obtained and the boys taken to the engine house and so well did their mothers do the whipping that the police had to tell them when to quit. We have always believed in the whipping post for petit larceny, wife beating, etc., and shall watch this experiment with interest. The boys were about 13 years of age.

AUTO ACCIDENT

Miss Nellie Sowers, of Lexington, was killed and two men were hurt, one perhaps fatally, in a triple collision near Lexington, on the Nicholasville pike, Sunday night. One auto hit a buggy and another ran into the wreckage. Miss Sowers was a telephone operator at the Phoenix Hotel.

MINISTER TRANSFERRED

The Methodist Conference transferred Rev. E. T. Caton, who has been pastor of the church at Grassy Lick and Camargo to the pastorate of the churches at Morehead and Olympia. Rev. Caton has made himself many friends in this city and county who will regret to hear of his transfer.

SPIRIT OF CO-OPERATION

Increasing Rapidly and Many Farmers Are Now Doing Much Free Work on Roads.

As all well-informed persons know, our turnpike levy is thoroughly inadequate and as it cannot be increased under the law many farmers have generously agreed to aid in the work of improving our highways with crushed stone by furnishing their teams to haul it, free of charge, thus enabling the county to buy about twice as much stone as it could buy if teams had to be paid for.

This plan was first suggested by County Attorney E. W. Senff to Messrs. H. M. and E. R. Prewitt some five years ago and the Prewitt & Thomson Station pike has been so worked ever since. Four cars of stone of about fifty tons each, have recently been spread on the Owingsville pike between Ewington and Mt. Sterling by Col. A. W. Hamilton and others. The same kind of service was rendered by the same gentlemen last year.

A number of citizens living on the Camargo and Levee pikes have signified their willingness to furnish free teams and as a result hundreds of dollars are now annually invested in rock that heretofore went for the hiring of teams.

As those who live on a turnpike get the most benefit from its use, they are more than repaid by the saving in the cost of transporting their crops to market and the pleasure to be derived in traveling a good road.

We confidently expect to see this plan become general throughout the county and as a result, be able to announce a constant improvement in our roads. As it is, taking the county as a whole, many automobile owners tell us the roads are in better condition today than they have ever been in the county's history.

A FINE SELECTION

Gov. James B. McCreary has announced the appointment of Mr. Robin H. White, of this city, as a member of the State Board of Pharmacy. Mr. White, who is an expert in his profession, has heretofore been a member of this board and his services were of such a high order as to attract wide attention. As he is a Republican and the Governor a Democrat, Mr. White's many friends are naturally very proud of this merited recognition. The appointment is for a term of five years.

THE PROGRAM BOOKLET

The management of The Tabb Theatre on Monday of this week distributed a neat booklet containing the program for the entire week at this popular theatre. In addition to the program it contained many interesting clippings regarding the shows and some of the "movie" stars.

It is the intention of this theatre to issue this book in place of the daily hand bills, streamers, etc., that in most instances only serve the purpose of littering up peoples premises and from the expressions we have heard it has been well received.

This attractive booklet will find a place on the reading table in many homes.

DANGEROUSLY ILL

Mr. J. Green Trimble, Sr., of this city, received news Saturday that his brother, Mr. Frank Trimble, of Memphis, Tenn., was critically ill and that he would have to submit to an operation at once to save his life. No other particulars were given. Mr. Trimble is a widely known financier and business man of the South, and has many interests in his native State of Kentucky and also in the West. He is about 75 years old, and has been complaining for some time, although it was not known that his trouble was serious until Saturday.

A PROGRESSIVE STEP

Citizens living on the west end of Winn street and outside of the city limits, have raised by subscription, a sufficient sum of money to grade and turnpike their street to its end, a distance of about 860 feet. They have employed Mr. Dan J. Hollearn to do the work and he expects to finish it during the next month. The county, in consideration of the citizens being at all other expense, have agreed to furnish the necessary stone. As this neighborhood is densely populated, it is a much needed improvement.

Ice Cream Supper

There will be an ice cream supper at Grassy Lick school house Friday, Sept. 17th. Everybody invited. A fine musical program has also been arranged.

SELLS FARM

County Jailor John F. Richardson has sold his farm of 109½ acres on the Paris pike to Mr. T. J. Bigstaff for $125 per acre, possession to be given March 1st, 1916.

GREAT RACE MEETING

The fall race meeting at Lexington is attracting large crowds and the racing is said to be first class. Quite a number from this city attend daily.

ANOTHER PIKE RE-CONSTRUCTED

Work has been completed on the Judy and Flat Rock pike and it is now in better condition than it ever was. It was thoroughly ditched and after over two thousand tons of crushed stone was put on, it was rolled smooth. The rock came from the quarry of Mr. Wm. Mee, who was so anxious for a good road that he did not charge the county a penny for the rock. This road is one of our leading thoroughfares and now brings much trade to our city, which was lost for some years, because of the bad condition of this road.

Mr. J. B. White is improving his store this week by painting the exterior. Many stores in the central part of the city have added greatly to their appearance in this manner during the past month.

WILL INVESTIGATE ELECTION

Judge J. M. Benton, of Clark county, delivered a strong charge to the Grand Jury of Clark county Monday. He charged that the last election was corrupt and said it was the duty of the Grand Jury to thoroughly investigate this matter and bring the guilty parties to justice. He also said that gambling on the result of the election must be investigated and the offenders punished. He flays the corruptionists in no uncertain language. He dwelt at length upon the illegal sale of whiskey in the city of Winchester. The September term of the Clark Circuit Court promises to be a busy one.

SCHOOL PAPER

The pupils of the Mt. Sterling High School will next week begin issuing a school paper. The paper will be issued twice per month. Several merchants have secured space. As yet no name has been selected. Watch for the first issue. It will contain news of interest especially to the parents of children.

DEMOLISHING OLD CHURCH

First Baptist Church Erected in 1871 is Being Rapidly Destroyed by Workmen.

Contractor A. E. Lawrence on Monday morning put a large force of workmen at work demolishing the old Baptist church on Main street and under his supervision the work will be pushed as rapidly as possible. This church was erected in 1871. The last service was held in the church Sunday morning and a special program was enjoyed by a large audience. The foundation for the new church will be completed this week and it is thought the brick work will be started the first of the coming week. When completed it will be the most modern church building in the city.

SYNOPSIS.

Professor Stilliter, psychologist, and Gordon Barclay, millionaire, plan to preach to the world the gospel of efficiency through a young and beautiful woman who shall believe that she is a heaven-sent messenger. They kidnap the orphaned little Amesbury girl, playmate of Tommy Steele, and conceal her in a cavern, in care of a woman, to be molded to their plan as she grows up. Fifteen years elapse. Tommy is adopted by Barclay, but loses his heirship and on a hunting trip discovers Celestia. Stilliter takes Celestia to New York. Tommy follows, she gets away from both of them, and her real work begins. At Barclay's invitation she meets a dozen of the business barons who are converted to her new gospel.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER VIII.

That so great and conservative a man as Barclay should lend the promise of his backing to the doctrines and tenets of Celestia aroused extraordinary interest all over the country, and even in England and on the continent.

Celestia was showered with invitations, most of which she declined. But she did not decline them all. It was her duty, she felt, to convert to her cause, all sorts and conditions of men and women, the man who had been born with a golden spoon in his mouth and the man who had been raised with a revolver in his hip-pocket.

She was asked to speak in the ballroom of a great house overlooking Central Park. The invitation to do so was instigated by Mary Blackstone, but Celestia did not know this, and the name signed to the note of invitation was one which tempted her to accept. It was a name which above all others stood, in the opinion of the man in the street, for all that is richest and most foolish.

To this function, Tommy was among those invited (all part of Mary Blackstone's plan), but, though he yearned to be wherever Celestia was, in spite of their latest quarrel, he was too busy tramping the streets of New York in search of a job to accept. Mary had hoped that among those to the manner born, Celestia, in spite of her genuine good looks and magnetic voice would appear insignificant if not impossible. She was doomed to disappointment.

Celestia, abandoning for the occasion her work-girl dress, and assuming once more that graceful flowing white garment in which she was first seen (outside of heaven) not only set a new standard of beauty, but started a new fashion in dress, and a kettle of jealousy among the women.

At one end of the long ballroom—a great space of mirrors, and silk, brocade with garlands, flowers overflowing baskets and cupids—was a platform for musicians. Upon this, to a great assemblage of fashionable men and women all talking at once, Celestia appeared suddenly—and there was silence.

The lovely low-browed face crowned with the strong dark hair, the steady, kind, unfathomable eyes were like a command that had to be obeyed.

Celestia never began at the beginning of a speech. She never started by expressing surprise at being asked to speak, or astonishment at perceiving so many upturned faces. Nor did she start by saying what she was going to talk about when she really did get started. At the point where Celestia began, another would have been half through. She plunged right into the heart of things with a compelling sweetness and seriousness that were irresistible.

She finished speaking, her hands dropped to her sides, and her eyes, well, though they had been open all along, they seemed to open, and she looked almost frightened and puzzled. A roar of applause rose, and in the back of the room, Professor Stilliter, who had been under a great strain, wiped the sweat from his brow.

Celestia came down from the platform, very shyly and the men began to crowd about her, and to shake her hand. They crowded about to tell her that they believed her, that her cause was theirs, that when the time came she could count upon them for money and for service.

"But it won't be easy," she smiled. "It's a greater house than this that we have to clean. A hundred years of mistaken laws and customs are not to be swept aside in a day. So, indeed, I shall need your service, and your backing, and your votes."

Celestia's hostess took possession of her and women forced their way among the men, in order to look closer at that simple Greek dress which, worn as Celestia wore it, so put to shame their own bare arms and shoulders and lizardish costumes.

Among the poor, when she said that she came from heaven, among the unfortunate and the downtrodden, Celestia was taken literally by so many that it staggers belief. We have only to remember that less gifted prophets have succeeded in imposing their divinity on multitudes. About Celestia there was nothing that rang false. She was goodness and sincerity personified.

Among the more sophisticated, the statement of her origin was taken as a figure of speech; not by all, of course, but by a vast majority.

CHAPTER IX.

To pave the way for their ultimate coup d'etat it was part of the triumvirate's plan to ally some of the bitterness which so many of the poor entertain for so many of the rich. Co Professor Stilliter, making use of those means which we have so often explained, put it into Celestia's head to go about a good deal among fashionable people.

To the simple-minded newspaper-read Douglas family it was all but inconceivable that there should be any such qualities as kindness, simplicity and virtue (except, perhaps, among the servants) in a Fifth Avenue mansion. And they were among Celestia's first converts to a contrary opinion.

"And where are you going tonight, my dear?" asked Mrs. Douglas. "And where did you get such a wonderful cloak? And you've done your hair differently."

Mrs. Douglas and her husband, sitting side by side (they had been holding hands) gazed at Celestia in astonishment. Nellie, who had entered the room just behind Celestia, was flushed with excitement and mystery. "My dears," said Celestia, "it's a very long story. But first of all you must know that I am going to a ball. And Freddie is going with me."

"Just wait till you see Freddie," exclaimed the Ferret's sister.

"This cloak," said Celestia. "(Isn't it lovely?) Isn't mine. It was loaned to me by a very beautiful lady. And so was everything else I've got on."

With heightened color, she threw the cloak back from her shoulders, and showed above an exquisitely simple gown of mauve tulle, her dazzling arms and neck.

Just then Freddie came in, resplendent in full evening dress. He had slicked his hair straight back and flat to his head, and he had borrowed a gold (at least it was yellow and shining) watch chain to go across his waistcoat.

Perceiving the state of wonderment into which his respectable parents were thrown by the wonder of his attire, Freddie hummed the opening bars of a delightful mazurka and gave an imitatively grave and graceful exhibition of the steps that went with them. A born dancer was the Ferret, and like many another unbalanced person, he had an exquisite ear for music.

"Celestia," he said, "says she's just going to look on. But I'm going to dance. These up-to-date dances were danced on the Bowery more'n a hundred years ago. And there's nobody can do 'em better than me."

If Celestia really thought that she wouldn't be recognized, she made a great mistake. It would have taken more than a conventional ball gown to disguise the compelling glory of her eyes; and although she did not dance, she was from the moment of her entry the center about which everything revolved; or better she was the center about which all the men revolved. Freddie the Ferret was a little center unto himself.

It was whispered about that Celestia had brought with her a genuine Bowery tough, a reformed gunman, and society, always keen for new sensations, proceeded to satisfy its curiosity. But not altogether at the Ferret's expense. A dance hall had always caused his mind to work consecutively and with more coherence than any other surroundings. Presented to his hostess, Freddie was neither perturbed by her importance nor her diamonds.

"Want to whirl?" he suggested with an engaging smile, and—as Mrs. MacAdam afterward told a friend: "I was so flabbergasted by his cheek, that I smiled a kind of sickly smile and went as I supposed to the slaughter. He made me dance better than I ever danced before. At first I kept wondering if my diamonds were safe (of course I keep the originals in safe deposits; haven't seen them for eight years) and if he had a gun in his hip pocket. Then I began to wonder why it was that I had never before really understood what it means to keep time. Why it's thrilling! But of course you know. You always keep such beautiful time. And he made me dance all sorts of new steps. And, my dear, he flattered me so, and—"

Here Mrs. MacAdam blushed and laughed at the same time. "Once I bungled something frightfully and nearly went down, and what do you think he said? 'You're all right, kid! Cling to popper!' Kid! What do you think of that, at my time of life? I couldn't get angry. I tried a little, but it was no use. I liked it. And when we'd finished, I was struggling to think of something to say, and what do you think I did say?" Here Mrs. MacAdam once more blushed and laughed. "I said, 'The night's young. I hope you'll ask me to spell again.' He said, 'You're on.' And sure enough he hunted me out for the very next fox-trot. But by that time all the real kids wanted to dance with him, and we old fogies had to stand aside. Can't you see the modern debutante? For years she had been dressing and painting herself more and more like a dear little street walker, and at least she gets a chance to dance with a real gunman. No, he's never really shot anybody or worn stripes. I wish you could have been there! Some of the men got him in the smoking room and since then everybody talks his language. Mrs. Selden admits that she tried to make him fall in love with her; but she failed. He's head over ears in love with this wonderful Celestia person, and small blame to him. She is too lovely. I've never seen a girl stay so long at a dance herself, not dance, and not look awkward. Of course she was surrounded by men. But she wouldn't talk shop. And do you know she isn't so dreadfully serious. She can make people laugh if she wants to. She wears conventional clothes, and proved once and for all that she can wear anything that she likes, and get away with it."

The account which Celestia gave of the ball had less to do with dancing. "The dancing isn't wicked at all," she told the Douglasses. "It's innocent, and graceful and good-natured. And the people? They aren't wicked either. They are just like other people, only they've got more money. It's a great blessing. Some day everybody will have money. And all the people I talked to were kind people, who want to do good, and make other people happy, and don't quite know how to set about it. But we are going to show them, aren't we? Freddie was so good! They said he was the best dancer there. He dances a little differently, but better. They all said that. And if only you could have seen the flowers! See, Mrs. MacAdam gave me these roses to bring to you. The house didn't have walls and wallpaper. It was all mirrors and flowers, and palm trees!"

Celestia sighed and then laughed at herself for sighing.

"Where's Freddie?" she asked. "Is he still sleeping? I'm going to talk to the typewriters' union, and then I am to meet and talk with some of the Independent Workers of the World. And then I am to have lunch with the Bishop of New York. And then, my dears, I am going to leave you for a while. I'm to go out to Pennsylvania where there's a terrible strike, and nobody will listen to anybody. But I'll be back before you know it."

She kissed Mrs. Douglas and hurried out. Celestia was almost always in a hurry now.

Nellie was waiting for her in the hall.

"Are you really going to Bitumen, Celestia?"

"Yes, really."

"I thought you might like to know that Mr. Barclay is already there."

CHAPTER X.

During the search for work Tommy Barclay returned once to the house where he had lived for so long in such luxury to get together a few of his personal belongings. But no more than could be carried in a couple of suitcases. From this visit he brought away clothes he required, a picture of his mother, and one, much faded, of the little Amesbury girl. His evening clothes, his black pearl stud, his tennis and polo cups, everything indeed of real value that belonged to him he left behind. It was his intention to enter the ranks of labor, on an equality with the other laborers, and by dint of sheer determination to work his way up until he should be in a position to support the girl of his choice.

Still, when he had refused the old butler's offer of the savings of half a lifetime, and heard the doors of the solid old mansion close behind him for perhaps the last time, a lump rose in Tommy's throat, and he went down the steps slowly on feet which already seemed to have lost their buoyancy.

A suitcase in each hand, he was turning toward the East side when he was accosted familiarly though respectfully enough by a youngish man in a brand new and very ill-fitting suit of blue serge.

"Are you Mr. Barclay?" asked this one, and, at Tommy's assurance that he was, he jerked his thumb toward a companion and said, "I'm Carson. This is Cracowitz." Tommy bowed as politely as to the president of the United States and the secretary of the navy, and said:

They Crowded About to Tell Her They Believed in Her.

"What can I do for you, gentlemen?" "Gordon Barclay won't see us," began Carson, but Tommy interrupted a little hastily:

"Mr. Barclay won't see you?" he said. "Are you the Carson and Cracowitz who have been figuring lately in western Pennsylvania?"

"We are," said Carson, and Cracowitz nodded vehemently. "Mr. Barclay," Carson went on, "ought to see us and you can get him to."

"Why ought he to see you?"

"For his own good and ours. We can't do anything with old man Kehr. He's for a fight to the finish. It doesn't matter about us men, but how about the women and children? How about them, Mr. Barclay?"

"Oh, I am on their side always," said Tommy.

"Then you'll fix it so that we can see Mr. Barclay?"

"Mr. Carson," said Tommy, "were you ever stone broke?"

The question shocked Mr. Carson into admitting he never had been.

"Well," said Tommy, for the first time smiling, "I am. Mr. Barclay has turned me off without a cent and has disinherited me besides. That shows how much influence I have with him. But I can tell you this about him. If he has said that he won't see you, he won't."

"We'd about come to that conclusion ourselves," said Carson. "You looked like a last chance."

He was turning away petulantly when he thought better of it.

"What are you going to do about it, Mr. Barclay, if it's manners to ask?"

"I was going to ask your advice," said Tommy. "My wish is to start life as a day laborer."

"Sure? Then you'd better come out to Pennsylvania with us."

"But I want to earn a living. I ought not to begin my career as a laborer by striking for higher wages, ought I?"

"We can find something better than stone breaking for a man of your education," said Carson. "If you're on our side."

"I am on your side," said Tommy; "that is one of the reasons why I have been disinherited."

As he spoke Mary Blackstone drove up in an open car and called to him. Tommy sprang forward with courteous alacrity. And Carson murmured, "The hell he's been disinherited!"

Mary leaned from the car and spoke in a low, thrilling voice, only audible to Tommy:

"Tommy, dear," she said, "I'm so wretched. We've made such a mess of things! Can't we begin all over again?"

Tommy answered with great gentleness: "We can't begin all over again," he said; "things can never be as they were. But we can be friends, Mary. She shook her head and the corners of her mouth turned bitterly down.

"You and I, Tommy," she said, "might be almost anything in the world to each other—but friends? Never. You may drive on, Rugby."

Tommy held out his hand, but she turned from it, as if in scorn, and the motor slipped quietly forward.

"Hi!" murmured Carson; "he has been disinherited. And he's just told her. And she's given him the mitten."

Well, many a leader of capital would have come no nearer the truth. For to the casual eye Tommy instead of Mary had been the pleader and the rejected.

CHAPTER XI.

In the mining town of Bitumen in western Pennsylvania there was for the moment an armed truce between the strike breakers and the strikers. The latter, under the leadership of Gunsdorf, held the village; the former, under the personal supervision of Kehr, had built a strong palisade which commanded the railroad station and the approaches to the town by rail. Both belligerents maintained a system of sentries, and a genuine state of war existed. More than one striker had been given a public funeral; more than one strike breaker had departed from Bitumen in a narrow box.

So much was clear. Less clear were the causes which had led to actual violence. It is enough that they led to a demand for larger wages and shorter hours, which Kehr, representing the owners, and intrenching himself behind the statement that too many such demands had been acceded to in the past, had peremptorily, and in a manner not tended to conciliate, refused. A general strike had been called, strike breakers and special deputies had been called in, and there had been dynamiting and sudden death.

The leaders were somewhat alike. Each had a supreme contempt and even hatred for the class which the other represented. Each was a strong-willed, stubborn man, having much power over other men. Neither was altruistic. At the back of Gunsdorf's head lurked the idea that one day he, too, might be a capitalist who should employ labor. Kehr had every intention of one day employing more labor himself. Neither truly represented the cause for which he stood. Both were prepared to sacrifice any number of other people's lives for the betterment of their own. There was, however, this difference between them: men obeyed Gunsdorf because they believed him to be a strong man of the people with the interests of the people at heart.

So Tommy felt about Gunsdorf when he heard the thick-set, trembling, passionate assailant of privilege hold forth in the town hall, when he saw tears gush out of the man's eyes as he told of women and children who were going under because there was no longer any bread in the house, and when he pretended that he could hear their cries and clapped his hands to his ears.

Tommy had been introduced to the "brother" as a safe man, but when Gunsdorf began to advocate a midnight rush upon the stockade and massacre of all who might be found within, many eyes were turned upon the silk-stocking to see how he would take the suggestion.

"We will put them," thundered Gunsdorf, "where they shall never again no more hear the voices of women and children lifted in joy—or in sorrow. We will show the world what it is to tread upon the poor and the unfortunate, so that little children die of hunger. What do we claim? Only a fair share of what belongs to us. What do we get? Crumbs and offal chucked to us from the rich man's kitchen door."

There was a howl of rage, that must have been heard in the stockade and caused some of its defenders to tremble. When this had rumbled away and died to nothing like a peal of thunder, Gunsdorf rolled his little eyes upon Tommy.

"Let us hear from the new brother," he said, smacking his lips. "Come up on the platform, Brother Barclay, and let the brothers and sisters see you."

One of the sisters eyed Tommy very closely as he slowly ascended the platform. She was Mrs. Gunsdorf, a young, dark, heavy woman with smoldering eyes and a scarlet mouth. When he turned and she had a good look at his handsome, brown, clean-cut face, her deep bosom began to rise and fall rapidly.

Tommy was in an awkward position. In full sympathy with his audience, he was not at all in sympathy with dynamiting and murder. His education told him that though an attack upon the stockade might prove successful its ultimate effect upon the attackers would be retribution in an extreme degree.

"It seems to me," he began quietly, "that what we want is justice—not vengeance. Have we—"

A loud chorus of mockery drowned his voice.

But Carson shouted at the top of his lungs, "Give him air," and when he had secured a sort of silence he went on: "Brother Barclay is all right," he shouted; "he thinks the same as we do, only he don't think it the same way! Give him air!"

Carson got a laugh, and Tommy was given air. And seeing that he was being given air, he smiled a very winning smile (it happened to light first upon Mrs. Gunsdorf) and began to speak once more—this time with confidence, because by good luck he had happened upon something to say, that seemed to him worth saying.

"Brothers," he said, "your backs are all turned to the door of the hall. Mine isn't."

He had succeeded in exciting their curiosity. Many turned and had a look at the door, and then looked back at the speaker. One or two smiled and nodded as if they knew what was coming, which they didn't. Tommy continued:

"While you were so loudly applauding my opening remarks (laughter and nudgings) that door opened and that door closed."

Once more heads turned toward the door.

"And," said Tommy, raising his voice for the first time, "a man went out."

"He went out in a hurry. He went out for two reasons. First, because his business here was finished, and second, because he knew that I recognized him in spite of his false mustache. Well, you could have caught him if you hadn't been so busy making noises at me. He was a Pinkerton man."

Tommy checked an outburst of rage with a commanding gesture.

"His business was to find out if we are going to attack the stockade or not. He thinks we are. But we are not!"

"The hell we're not! Why aren't we? Who told you?" etc., etc.

"It's for you to decide," cried Tommy, "but I wish you'd let me tell you what I saw on the platform at the freight station."

Again by exciting curiosity he had secured attention.

"I saw," said Tommy, "a large wooden box. On the box was printed 'Rotary Air Pump.' But on the box under these words had once been printed the name Goss & Goss. That conveys no meaning to you? Goss & Goss is a firm which does business on Broadway. It deals in uniforms, rifles, ammunition and cannon. Brothers, the 'Rotary Air Pump' which I saw on the platform at the freight station is a machine gun."

There was a long and ominous silence.

"Have you ever," continued Tommy cheerfully, "watched a man watering his front lawn with a hose? It's easy for the man with the hose to hit every blade of grass on his front lawn. It's just as easy as it is for the man with the machine gun to hit every man in a crowd."

"Attack that stockade? That's just what old man Kehr wants you to do. He will move you down like grass, and the public will say it's your own fault."

Not only did the large crate contain a machine gun, but smaller cases which Tommy had not observed, marked "Picks and Shovels," containing high-power rifles and ammunition. But for that night, at least, old man Kehr's deadly preparations for giving the strikers what he considered a well-deserved and salutary lesson were in vain.

Dawn broke. "They're not coming," said the Pinkerton man. "They must have listened to Mr. Barclay, after all. But it looked, so help me, as if they were going to tear him to pieces first, and try to rush us afterward."

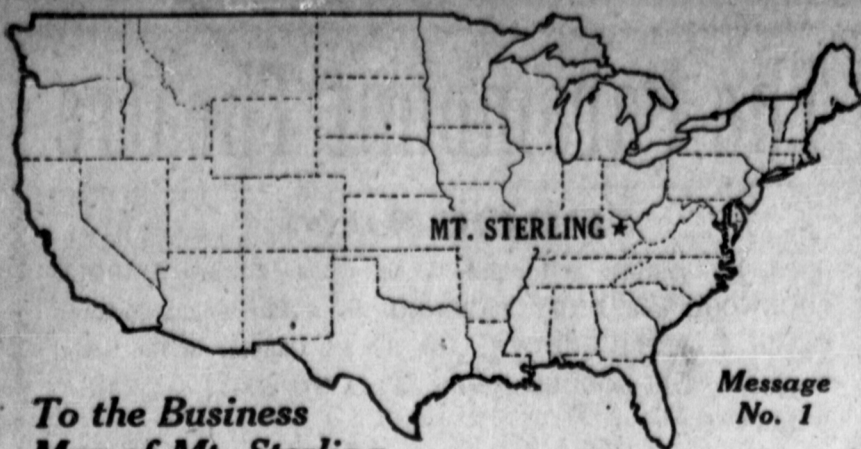

"Any man with brains," said Kehr, "is a menace when he's on the wrong side of a question. We must get rid of Mr. Thomas Barclay. Give me that code book and a telegraph blank."

After some labor and a grim smile at the finished product, old man Kehr dispatched the following cipher to Gordon Barclay:

"Sucker won't bite. Your muttering carabuster Tommy has tickled Aphrodite. Please pound his whiskers quick."

"Now, then," he said to Mr. Pinkerton man, "rush that!"

To the Business Men of Mt. Sterling

When a good salesman goes out after business, he first puts on a clean collar and gets his shoes shined. Then he looks like more business—and he's made a flying start toward getting it.

Likewise, a community can go after more business—and get it. The "clean collar and shiny shoes" of this town are the well-painted stores, the bright, cheery homes, the fresh, clean-looking buildings. The part paint plays in building up local pride cannot be put in figures—but its good effects are recorded on the local merchants' sales sheets. Buy good paint. We recommend and sell!

WINTER PLEASURE

AND—WHAT?

Old Winter is slipping along a little closer each day, and almost before we realize it we will be making preparations for the cold weather festivities.

But why not vary the routine a little this season?

Since we have six days of the week in which to seek our worldly pleasures, why not make a practice of devoting one day—Sunday—to the more serious side of life?

"Going to church" should not be limited merely to the members of the various denominations. It should include every person who is in any way able to reach a place of worship.

And then the church itself—even the ministers—might descend a little nearer to earth and make their services appeal to the person who only too often finds his way to the House of God only to be told in seathing terms what a damnable sinner he is, and how he should be shunned by all clean things.

Preach Christ, by all means, but preach him as he himself preached—not in terms of sarcasm or denunciation of the sinner, but in gentleness and humility, with an appealing humanity which reaches to the heart of even the most hardened and indifferent of people.

The church is sacred and should remain so, but the injection of a little life and humanity into the services would add materially to the attendance and the ultimate good they accomplish.—Exchange.

PLEA FOR THE BOYS

The opening the school year is at hand. It is not too late to decide that the boy who has completed the grades and who is anxious in his own boyish way "to go to work" shall have the advantage of at least a high school education. He may not be able to see the benefit of it now. He wants to take his place in the busy world and to earn money—even though the wage be a small one. He forgets that his lack of education may lead him into a "blind alley" occupation which offers no opportunity for promotion. He is condemned for life to starvation wages because short-sighted parents have allowed him to have his own choice when he was not competent to make a wise one. We have met many men who expressed regret that they were unable to receive a good education. Some of them succeeded in spite of this drawback. Their strength of character, pluck and perseverance made up for their educational shortcoming. Still they regretted that the opportunity for gaining an education was gone forever. We have yet to meet the man who regretted the time he had spent in getting an education. That was a possession more prized as the years sped on. Do not condemn your son to a lifetime of unremunerative toil and the bitterness of vain regrets for the opportunity that has been foolishly allowed to slip away. Give them an education. We plead particularly for the boy, because girls in the family are given every opportunity commensurate with the parents' means to acquire an education. Too often it runs toward art, music and literature, rather than more useful accomplishments of home making. But this is not the place to dwell upon the shortcoming of our schools for girls. The point is that the education of the girl is attended to, while the boy is set to earning money for himself or for the family. Give him a chance, and if he has the right stuff in him he will repay the cost of his education in a more useful life.—Exchange.

MISS WEBER WEDS

Friends here have received the following announcement: "Dr. and Mrs. John Langdon Weber, of Memphis, Tennessee, announce the marriage of their daughter, Anna Conway, to Mr. Elbridge W. Bartley, on Saturday, August twenty-ninth, nineteen hundred and fifteen, at Rest-a-While Cottage, Monteagle, Tennessee."

The news of the wedding is received here with a great deal of interest. The bride resided here with her parents during Dr. Weber's pastorate of the Methodist church. She is well remembered as a very charming and accomplished young lady. Many friends join in tendering best wishes.

MEN, DOGS AND BONES

Every dog looks after his own bone, for no other dog will guard it for him.

Are we, as residents of this community, less alive to our own interests than the dog is to his?

Many bones are lying around us in the way of opportunities for advancement, but we are prone to pass them by. We are too absorbed in the dime of the present to even see the dollar of the future.

This paper has more than once spoken of the advisability of every person working in harmony in a determined effort to make this a better and more prosperous community.

Like the dog, other towns and other peoples are guarding their own bones and are reaching out for more to replenish their store.

But what are we doing? In fact, are we doing anything toward this end?

Are we making any effort to increase the number of home industries and their outputs? Are we making any concerted effort toward increasing the wealth of the community, and toward keeping that wealth in the community?

Are we doing anything at all of any nature toward building up our town and countryside, or are we just drifting with the tide and wherever the tide may take us?

The lowly dog looks after his bone, but what are we doing?

FISCAL COURT

At the regular meeting of the Fiscal Court held last Tuesday claims amounting to about $1,500 were allowed. The bridge which has just been completed at Sideview was accepted, and the Court decided to build a new bridge on the Plum Lick pike, where Bourbon and Montgomery counties adjoin. The Court also discussed the question as to completing the pavement entirely around the Courthouse, and practically decided to build it, but postponed final action until next meeting.

VICTIM OF TUBERCULOSIS

The great white plague claimed another victim in this county last Monday when Mr. Chris Copher succumbed to the dread disease after a long illness. He was about 60 years old, and resided with his brother, Mr. John Copher, near Levee. The burial occurred Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Copher was well known and had many friends. He is survived by his aged mother, two brothers, who reside in this county, and two sisters, who live at Salt Lick, Bath county.

We noticed a good way of getting rid of rats the other day, and we hand it on to our farmer friends. Collect some thin chips, pieces of shingles, or tin, and pour over them enough molasses to cover them well. Sprinkle dry lye over them and place them in every rat hole you can find. Like the coy maiden, their love for you will soon cool and they will seek other pastures for their depredations.

A DISGRACEFUL SITUATION

At Hickman, Ky., it appears the local option laws have not been enforced. Last week, as a natural consequence, things became intolerable and following the killing of three men, one of them, a popular Deputy Sheriff, the decent people organized themselves into a band of regulators and publicly raided all "blind tigers" in the city. After destroying the liquors found, the proprietors were given a certain number of hours to leave.

This is a thoroughly disgraceful situation and the officers there are solely to blame. The law is enforced HERE and it can be enforced ANYWHERE. All that is required is one honest official backed by a clean, healthy public sentiment. He may have a hard fight, but he will surely win out in the end.

The versatile young editor of the Gazette, in taking us to task for our support of the Democratic ticket, evidently loses sight of the fact that ours is a Democratic and not an Independent newspaper. By participating in the primary, we became in honor bound to support the nominees. Unless we had so intended, we would have announced that fact and not entered the primary. The primary law so provides and this course is the only fair one in the settlement of contests within the party. No man should consider himself bigger than his party and when he loses in a fairly conducted primary, he ought to be game enough to take his medicine without whimpering.

While it will doubtless do no more good than our admonitions have in the past, we want to again remind the police of the fact that after some innocent person is killed, it will be a trifle late to begin enforcing the law governing the operation of automobiles.

TEACHERS MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the teachers and trustees of Montgomery county, was held Saturday afternoon. Professor Charles D. Bohannon, of the Department of Agricultural Economics of the State University, met with the teachers. He presented many new ideas and thoughts and furnished plans for the social survey of the county which is making much headway. A visit was made to the Consolidated School at Camargo and the teachers were loud in their praise of the design. When completed it will be a two story, six room brick school building with basement containing large assembly room and here will also be located the workroom for manual training, domestic science and agriculture, which will be taught by specialists in those departments. A hot and cold water system will be installed and a four-room cottage will be completed for use of the teachers. A large stable will also be erected to accommodate the horses and vehicles of the pupils.

The buildings with the school farm of nine acres will give this district and county one of the most modern consolidated schools in the United States. The people of the district are enthusiastic over the prospects.

We are always delighted to meet strangers. They frequently laugh at our jokes.

Would you recognize a ten dollar gold piece if you saw it? Neither would we.

The future of Mexico is in our hands, and we are grasping it as firmly as a hot poker.

DOLLARS AND DUCKS

It is well for young men to know that dollars are like ducks—one follows another—and though they may waddle along slowly and with some effort, they will eventually get there.

We have young men in this city who are just starting out on the road of life, but where that road will lead is for them to say.

They are earning a few dollars now and as time progresses their earning capacity will increase. In the early accumulations are thrown to the birds it is more than likely that in later life the buzzards will roost on the graves of their ambition.

But if their first dollars are carefully laid away in a well sewed pocket, and this lesson of thrift and frugality is fostered and encouraged, then in time the bank will become the depository of their earnings and accumulations and eventual wealth, and the eagle will soar over the heads of successful men.

Those who waste today will squander tomorrow, and tomorrow is the agent of the devil and the prime minister of hell.

Keep an eye on the young men of our city, but keep both eyes on those who spend wisely but not foolishly, who are full of life and ginger but never carry it to excess, whose eyes are fixed upon the eagle and not upon the buzzard.

Like the waddling duck, they may advance slowly, but they will get there in time.

"HOLIER THAN THOU"

A few years ago an inflamed mob lynched an innocent old negro in Springfield, Ill., on suspicion, but the south refrained from branding the whole northern race as below par.

A few weeks ago a Georgia mob lynched Leo Frank, and the Chicago Tribune immediately jumps to the conclusion and asserts that the southern people are uneducated, unrefined and a bunch of bad eggs generally.

But fortunately the Tribune speaks only for the Tribune, and not for the northern people as a class. The north knows the south as it is—a refined, educated, courteous and generous hearted class of people, who decry the action of the mob as quickly as do the people of the northern States under like conditions.

The south stands shamed by the action of the few of the Leo Frank mob, just as the north stood shamed by the action of the Illinois mob, and by the action of yet another Illinois mob, which sought to lynch a murderer but a few days ago.

We condemn mob law wherever it exists, but we do like to see fair play on the part of the public press. "Holier Than Thou" editors do more harm than good.

THE OTHER SIDE

"The boys and girls of today are entirely too smart—they know more than their parents," remarked a citizen the other day.

This is not true in some cases, but we fear it is only too true in others.

But is it the fault of the children, or of the parents?

When the parents of today were the children of yesterday they were taught to reverence their parents and respect their elders.

It is so in some cases today, but in many the child is practically turned loose to shift for itself while the parent spends the time in a chase for the pleasures of life.

Even in its infancy the child learns from necessity to depend upon its own resources, and as each day but serves to extend its worldly knowledge it gradually drifts away from the parental authority and assumes a degree of independence and self importance entirely out of proportion to its years.

To write at all it is necessary to do both good and bad work—the proportion is what matters.

I may be wrong, but I think the best advice in the world is this: Ignore your enemies.

SOCIAL EVENTS

Mrs. Earl W. Senff will entertain Wednesday afternoon with a Five Hundred party at her home on North Maysville street.

Mrs. Maggie Gaitskill and Miss Mary Apperson entertained most delightfully at their charming home on Apperson Hill Tuesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. James N. Stofer, of Alvin, Texas.

Mrs. Pattie Johnson Riley entertained the Bridge Club in honor of Mrs. Ernest Sellers, of Indianapolis, Ind., Wednesday afternoon at her home on West Main street. A delicious luncheon was served and a most enjoyable afternoon was spent.

Mrs. Charles A. Lindsay entertained at Bridge Friday afternoon at the handsome home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Kirkpatrick, on West Main street. During an intermission in the game delightful refreshments were served.

Mrs. Ben R. Turner entertained at Five Hundred Saturday afternoon at her home on West High street in honor of Mrs. James N. Stofer, of Alvin, Texas. At the conclusion of the interesting games a delicious luncheon was enjoyed.

Mrs. Harry Bowman Ringo gave a series of entertainments in honor of Mrs. James N. Stofer, of Alvin, Texas, last week. On Tuesday she entertained all the relatives of Mrs. Stofer and on Thursday and Saturday quite a large number of friends. The handsome home was beautifully decorated for the occasions and elaborate luncheons were served.

ALLIES TO BORROW A BILLION ON BONDS

The present plan of the joint Anglo-French financial commission is to borrow $1,000,000,000 in the United States on straight British and French Government Bonds without any collateral whatever. If this vast sum of money is obtained, it is to be spent to the last cent, in the United States in payment for wheat, cotton, meat and other commodity shipments, including munitions of war. It will, therefore, in the opinion of financial authorities, be classified as a commercial loan.

Men scarcely know the great influence the House of Kuppenheimer has wielded for the betterment of the clothing industry in America.

Kuppenheimer Clothes have come to town and we want you to meet the new fall styles face to face. The live young man who admires the beautiful in tailoring, graceful lines and faultless style, without the suggestion of the burlesquer or the vulgar, will find that inexpressible something in our fall showing of Kupp models which sets them apart from the best of other clothes.

COPYRIGHT 1915 THE HOUSE OF KUPPENHEIMER

The cut here is copied from a work in oil of a living model wearing a Kuppenheimer young man's suit which will be known and advertised as the Beaufort. See the graceful lapel, the one link button to close, the long skirt, the short waist and narrow collar, yet wide lapels. The vest too is new and the trousers have that look that only Kupp trousers have. Kuppenheimer vests and trousers are given the same care in construction as their coats, making a Kuppenheimer suit a COMPLETE SUIT.

STATE PRESS COMMENTS

Views of Several of the Newspaper Fraternity on the Democratic Convention.

Entirely Satisfied

A mammoth gathering of Democrats, representative of the great Democratic citizenship of Kentucky, has gathered together in a State convention, and in an assembly in which harmony was the watchword and progress the essential aim has established as its basic principles a platform strong in its every plank and Democratic in its every utterance. The Democratic State convention will go down in the history of Kentucky political gatherings as one of the sanest in the breadth of its vision, and safest in its earnest attention to the welfare of Kentucky and its citizenship, which has ever been held in the State.—Paducah News-Democrat.

Good Enough

The party has a good platform, and a good all around ticket on it, now for their election, and then for the enactment of some needed measures and repeal of some useless and vicious ones.—News-Leader, Springfield.

hills and as true as gospel and this question will be finally settled by the popular vote of the people in favor of closing the saloons in Kentucky. Let the question rest and elect the Democratic ticket for we are no worse beat than we suffered many times while we were trying to get County Unit. We should stand by the Democratic party because that party has given us all the temperance legislation we have and will give us all we ask when we carry on the campaign sufficiently long to educate the masses.—Smithland Enterprise.

Mr. Beckham Badly Treated.

When Senator J. C. W. Beckham, after repeated invitations to address the convention, had the misfortune to denounce the unreasonable removal of the men who had labored hard for the success of the party in the past, and offered a motion that the convention reconsider its action, he was hissed and an attempt was made to howl him down. Gaily standing his ground, Senator Beckham insisted on his motion, which was finally ruled out of order on a technicality by the chairman. The affair caused a great sensation and the convention was immediately adjourned amid much confusion.—Shelbyville News.

What Chance Has Morrow?

With a platform on which every Democrat can stand and a ticket that every Democrat can support, why should there not be a united Democracy at the November election? What chance can Morrow and his ticket have to defeat Stanley and the splendid nominees on the ticket with him?—Shelby Record.

Our Peerless Senator.

A report comes from the Louisville Democratic convention that Senator Beckham was hissed by some of the more ultra-whisky delegates present, but, hiss all they will, they can not injure Kentucky's peerless Senator whose Democracy and goodness is admired by all but knaves and asses. In the meantime, it should be borne in mind that nothing but the goose and the snake hiss.—Bowling Green News.

Both Game and Honest.

The gamest thing we have heard of in a long time was the appearance of Senator Beckham before the recent Louisville convention which everyone knows was packed with his political enemies. He had the nerve to go before them and tell them that they had made a grievous mistake in turning out some of the ablest and best Democrats in the State from places on the party committees, just because they had opposed certain of the nominees before the primary. Of course they hissed him. Any snake will do the same when a man stands before it. Beckham and his friends and McChesney and his friends want to and have tried to do everything in their power to promote harmony and good feeling toward the ticket nominated but it looks like those who will be the beneficiaries are trying to do their damndest to prevent them.—Stanford Interior Journal.

Right, as Usual.

"There is no use now in 'kicking against the pricks.'" It was a rather unfortunate incident and I deplore it, but the duty of all good Democrats now is to rally to the ticket and not make a mountain out of a mole hill.—Col. W. P. Walton.

the convention Tuesday, was no more nor less than a protest in favor of his friends who without a hearing were removed from the most important committees of the party's State organization.

No one will question his right to introduce such a resolution or protest, on the contrary, all fair and impartial judges must commend him for standing by his lifelong and loyal friends.

The position that Mr. Beckham is occupying, that of Senator of the United States, entitled him, especially so at a party convention, to a respectful hearing. After his pledge to support the party in the coming campaign, it came with very bad grace not to accord him the consideration that his brains, his talent and his party service and the great office he holds entitle him. He has been in many a political battle and with dignity and poise and courage and rare ability acquitted himself with credit to himself and his party. His wounds and his scars are marks of honor.

Senator Beckham has splendid qualities and it is these same splendid qualities that his enemies would try to rob him of. Senator Beckham will be a champion of the cause of Democracy in the coming campaign and the commotion of last Tuesday will be forgotten after a few days have gone by. It is but a little tempest in a tea pot.

The chapter dealing with political affairs in the history of Kentucky for sixteen years past has been but the story of Senator Beckham's political career. He knows more of our present political affairs than any man in the Commonwealth. He is a master hand, and as a campaigner, his is the master voice. Yes, Senator Beckham, your services and your counsel are needed in the party now and for years to come. Let us all join hands, keeping step to the music and circle to right. Who said anything about a resolution? I know we didn't.—Michael O'Sullivan in Shelbyville Sentinel.

Committee Action a Blunder.

The Democratic platform convention was a love feast up to the closing hour of its night session, when a serious blunder was committed. The good feeling and general rejoicing was marred and the delegates returned to their homes with misgivings and doubts instead of with confidence and rejoicing.

The fly in the ointment was the action of the Committee on Permanent Organization in removing Rufus Vansant as chairman of the State Central Committee; Ab Rhea and Bridges White, members from the State-at-Large, and Hon. Urey Woodson as member of the National Committee.

There was no intimation that such action was contemplated among the delegates. It was plotted and planned in secret and the convention was so dazed by the report that it was adopted before any one realized what a grave blunder had been committed.

There was neither justification nor reason that such a thing should be done at a time when party harmony is absolutely necessary to party success.

Senator Beckham was right, but untimely. He came too late to save the party from a mistake. Senator Beckham stood up for his friends and his party's interest. A distinguished citizen when he does this should be applauded and not hissed.—Elizabethtown News.

Good Ticket and Platform.

The Kentucky Democratic platform is a splendid pronouncement along progressive and right lines. If the standard bearers of the party, to be elected in November, live up to the pronouncements in the executive, administrative and legislative departments of the government of the State, the proud old Commonwealth of Kentucky will advance along the highway of progress and prosperity as it has not done for years.

The ticket is composed of some of Kentucky's most gifted sons and there is no reason we can see why the ticket should not be elected in November by an overwhelming majority.—Fulton Leader.

Ticket Will Win.

The platform adopted at Louisville last Tuesday was in harmony with the will of the party majority as expressed at the primary, and will be accepted and supported by every Democrat who believes in majority rule. It is assumed that this includes every member of the party, because one of our principles is that the majority shall rule. The entire ticket will win in November.—Louisiana News.

The Platform.

The platform adopted by the Democrats of Kentucky in their convention at Louisville last week is a sweeping and a splendid one. The planks it contains pledge the party to the enactment of laws which will be a benefit to the people of the State and a death blow to the lobbyists and big interests. It is a platform upon which the progressive members of any party can well stand, and upon which all factions of the Democratic party can easily unite. It will enable Kentucky to rank as the keynote State in the endorsement of Woodrow Wilson and his administration at the National convention next year.—Muhlenberg Argus.

Your Check is Your Surest Receipt

You PAID that bill. You are SURE of it. And your wife remembers that you DID too. But here is a NEW BILL with the words "PLEASE REMIT!" Rather unpleasant. What are you going to do about it? YOU CAN'T FIND THE RECEIPT. Well, the only sure way is to PAY BY CHECK. Then you can show your CHECKS AS RECEIPTS. PAY YOUR BILLS BY CHECK. The only SAFE way.

GRINS AND GROANS

Too Deliberate. A judge, in remanding a criminal, called him a scoundrel. The prisoner replied, as he was leaving the courtroom:

"Sir, I am not as big a scoundrel as your Honor"—here the culprit stopped, but finally added—"takes me to be."

"Put your words closer together," said the judge.

Ultimatum Sent.—A young man who last June received his diploma has been looking around successively for a position, for employment, and for a job. Entering an office, he asked to see the manager, and while waiting he said to the office boy:

"Do you suppose there is any opening here for a college graduate?"

"Well, dere will be," was the reply, "if de boss don't raise me salary to t'ree dollars a week by tem-mor-row night."—Christian Register.

Slow Pay—Fast Driver.—"What do you know of the character of the defendant?" the judge asked in an accident case. A white man had been arrested for careless driving of a secondhand Ford car.

"Hits tollable," Miranda said.

"Have you ever seen him drive his car before?"

"Yas, sah."

"Would you consider him careless?"

"Well, Jedge, ez fer de car,—dat little thing ain't gwinter hurt no-buddy, but being us is all here, I might ez well tell yo dat he sho' is keerness 'bout payin' fo' his wash!"

Tinted Polygamy.—The old negro had been arrested for "having more than one wife," the last woman being the complainant. He happened to be well known locally and an orderly character.

"How many wives have you had?" demanded the judge.

"Six, yo' Honor," was the reply.

"Why couldn't you get along with them?" the judge insisted.

"Well, sub,—de fust two spilled de white folks' clothes when dey washed 'um; de thu'd worn't no cook; de fo'th was des nacherally lazy,—en' de fif—I'll tell yo, Jedge,—de fif she—"

"Incompatibility?" the court suggested.

"No, yo' Honor," said the old negro slowly, "worn't nothin' lik' dat. Yo' jes' couldn't get along wid her unless yo' wuz somewheres else."

A Faithful Member.—"Pat was drowned."

"Couldn't he swim?"

"Yes, but he was a union man. He swam eight hours and quit."
